Teaching Materials

- 2008- Present Environmental Law for Global Professionals. Materials introducing graduate students in environmental governance and management to fundamental institutional frameworks in environmental law, including property, administrative regulation, multi-stakeholder regulation, and international environmental, trade, and human rights law. Developed for Masters in Environmental Governance Students at the University of Freiburg, Germany

1999-2008 Cases, Materials and Problems for Environmental Law I and 2. Internet based teaching materials organized around ecosystem problems prepared jointly with Barry Boyer and Margaret Shannon.

1997-2000 Materials for Administrative Law. Provided in digital form for student access via the internet

COURSES TAUGHT

Current Advanced Law and Society Research Seminar. Colloquium for advanced graduate and law students on conducting socio-legal research. It builds upon distinguished speaker and faculty workshop presentations and provides students an opportunity to meet separately with the presenters about the challenges and choices of producing research (usually co-taught with Anya Bernstein or Mateo Taussig-Rubbo).

International Environmental Law. Introduction to main legal principles, structures, and processes used to address environmental problems across national boundaries.

International Business Transactions. Review of legal arrangements governing business transactions across national borders, including trade in goods and services, agency and distributorship relationships, foreign direct investment, and technology transfers.

Property. Introduction to traditional interests in property and the legal framework for managing, allocating, and distributing resources in the U.S. Focuses largely on the classical 'private law' system, but emphasizes the social origins and consequences of property interests.

International Trade and Environment. Examination of the relationship between international trade law (GATT, WTO, NAFTA, EU) and national, international, and non-state environmental law.

Introduction to Environmental Law (University of Freiburg). Introductory course for Masters Students in Environmental Governance at the University of Freiburg. Discussion of the nature of law; common, civil, post-socialist, and theocratic legal systems; property-based, regulatory, and international environmental law; standing, justiciability, and remedies; soft law and supra-governmental regulation.

Recent Administrative Law. Examination of the constitutional status, political role, organization, procedures, powers, jurisdiction, and obligations of administrative agencies in the U.S. legal system.

Environmental Law – Pollution Control. Survey of the main legal frameworks for controlling pollution, including common law, the Clean Air and Clean Acts, RCRA and CERCLA. It also introduces students to different conceptions of environmental problems and types of environmental practice. (Co-taught with Kim Connolly, Richard Lippes, Thomas Tyler, and Adam Walters.)

Past Colloquium in Environmental and Natural Resources Law. Upper level seminar aimed primarily at law students enrolled in the Environmental Law Program. Examines cutting edge issues in environmental policy. Most recent focus was on hydraulic fracturing. Intensive research paper required.

Environmental Law 1 and Environmental Law 2. Review of U.S. institutional frameworks and ecological perspectives for defining and resolving environmental problems. Includes common law, administrative, market, stakeholder, and informational mechanisms. (With Barry Boyer).

Soft Law. Seminar focusing on the growing use and discussion of soft law in domestic and international legal systems.

Corporate Responsibility, Private Standard Setting, and Law. Examination of the growth and implications of standards for corporate behavior developed by NGO networks and business associations.

"Indian" Indian Law. Seminar on legal ordering within indigenous communities. (With John Mohawk)

Property Rights and Economic Development. Seminar examining efforts to use property rights reforms to facilitate economic development. Review of underlying theories, practical effects, and implications for gender relations and indigenous peoples. (With Sharmistha Bagchi-Sen)

Introduction to American Public Law. Short course discussing the basic structure, principles, and operation of the U.S. public law system. University of Freiburg, Germany, January 2004.

Forest Certification in Developing and Transitioning Countries. Short course exploring the adoption and implementation of forest certification in the 'second' and 'third' worlds. University of Freiburg, Germany, June 2005.

Enforcing Environmental Law. First year bridge course on the private and public enforcement of environmental laws. (With Barry Boyer)

Colloquium on Current Issues in Environmental Policy. Upper level course for law students enrolled in the Environmental Concentration. Examination of cutting edge issues in environmental policy. (With Margaret Shannon).

Forest Certification: Social, Political, and Economic Dimensions. Short course exploring the implications of forest certification for politics, governance, property systems, and local communities. University of Freiburg, Germany, January 2004.

Introduction to U.S. Environmental Law. Short Course for Law Students at the University of Freiburg, Germany, February 2001.

Forest Certification as Environmental Policy Making. Short Course for Forestry Students at the University of Freiburg, Germany, February 2001.

Private Law Making. Seminar examining the rapidly growing practice of standard setting and enforcement by networks of non-governmental organizations.

Science and Natural Resources Policy. Seminar on the changing role of science in natural resources and environmental policymaking. Readings on sociology of science, policy studies, and ecology. Empirical case studies on use of science in selected natural resource policy processes. (SUNY Buffalo and University of Washington)

Natural Resource Regulation and Administration. Course building on the institutional structure outlined by the basic property course, but focusing primarily on the operation of legislative and administrative agencies in regulating 'private' and managing 'public' resources in the US

Air Pollution Regulation. Seminar on the legal and institutional structure of air pollution regulation in the North America, Europe, and Asia. Emphasis on institutional development and the special challenges of creating international systems of air pollution control.

Tribal Law and Sovereignty. Seminar inquiring into the meaning, implications, possibility, and implementation of tribal sovereignty in the modern world. (With John Mohawk and Robert Porter)

Federal Indian Law. Introduction to the general U.S. legal framework, primarily federal, in which issues involving Native Americans and their communities are adjudicated.

Democracy. Seminar on alternative ways of conceiving and constructing democratic institutions. Relationship between "liberal" and participatory modes of democracy. (With Guyora Binder)

Environmental Institutions. Seminar on alternative ways of organizing and reforming environmental regulation. (With Barry Boyer and John Thomas)

Regulatory Enforcement. Seminar on the problems and choices confronting regulatory enforcement officials and how they resolve them. (With Barry Boyer and Jeff Lacey)

Empirical Research Design. Introduction to logic and practice of social research. Emphasis on comparative advantages and disadvantages of alternative methods.

Criminal Law. Introduction to the system in which criminal conduct is defined, detected, evaluated, and punished in the U.S. Special emphasis on the problems posed by "group" criminality. (Syracuse University College of Law)

Public Law Processes. Introduction to the legal structure of public law making, primarily legislation and secondarily administration. Inquiry into the nature and legitimacy of law in a democratic society. (Syracuse University College of Law)

Workshop on Indian Law. Exploratory seminar on the legal issues confronting Indian Peoples and possible ways of assisting them in developing responses. (With John Mohawk)

Theories of Property. Seminar on philosophical, economic and sociological analysis of property systems.

Natural Resources Law. Examination of legal institutions governing the use, allocation and distribution of natural resources. Emphasis on alternative institutional arrangements.

Law and Social Policy. Seminar examining the relationship between social interests and the formation and implementation of legal policies. (At Lewis and Clark Law School)

Torts. General introduction to civil law rights and liabilities among persons in non-contractual relationships. (At Lewis and Clark Law School)

Energy Law. Survey of state and federal laws affecting production and use of common and emerging energy forms. (At Lewis and Clark Law School)
