

Common Grievances or Ethical Pitfalls Seen During Virtual Proceedings

Elizabeth M. Midgley, Esq.

Stillwell Midgley Visco

Ethical Obligations when Lawyers Work Remotely

Competence (Rule 1.1)

Diligence (Rule 1.3)

Confidentiality (Rule 1.6)

Supervision (Rules 5.1 and 5.3)

Unauthorized Practice of Law (Rule 5.5)

Rule 1.1

Diligence

Rule 1.3

Rule 1.6

Confidentiality

Rules 5.1 and 5.3

SUPERVISION

Unauthorized Practice of Law

Rule 5.5

Other Pitfalls of Working at Home

(still Rule 1.1)

Tall Tales from the Old West

Starring...

Pecos Bill

Blue Foot Sue

Calamity Jane

Davy Crockett

Paul Bunyan

Babe, the Ox

Wyatt Earp

A Reading, Writing Product from The Robin's Nest

You owe a duty of competent representation to your clients.

You need to act with reasonable diligence and promptness, even when proceedings are moving slowly or Courts are closed.

Confidentiality must be a serious consideration.

Supervision may be difficult during virtual times but is as important as always, if not more.

Watch where you are practicing.

Always remember,
no matter where you are or what you are wearing,
there are ethics
rules that must be followed.